Organs Harvested from Live Prisoners

According to Yuan Hong, a former staff in a Shenyang hospital, "The executioner would be aware that the prisoner's organs were going to be harvested; hence he would not kill him with one shot. According to my colleagues, it takes time to harvest the organs. If the prisoner dies too soon, the blood does not circulate and the harvested organs will be of no use. Hence when the prisoner is in the ambulance, the doctors begin to take out his organs while he is still alive. When the organs are harvested, the prisoner is still bleeding. The organs are then kept in special containers and brought to the operation theater.

Individual Cases:

Liu Yufeng, tortured to death in July of 2000 for practicing Falun Gong.

All of Ren Pengwu's organs from the throat to the lower abdomen were removed. His body was cremated by the police without his family's consent after he was tortured to death.

Wang Bin, tortured to death in September, 2000 for practicing Falun Gong.

What is Falun Gong (Falun Dafa)?

Falun Gong, also known as Falun Dafa, is an ancient self-improvement practice of mind, body and spirit that is guided by the principles of Truthfulness, Compassion, and Tolerance. Practitioners of Falun Gong aspire to live by these principles in their daily lives, striving to achieve a state of selflessness and inner balance.

Falun Gong, which is rooted in the traditional Chinese culture, was first introduced to the public in China by Li Hongzhi in 1992. It quickly spread throughout the world and is credited with helping practitioners achieve both physical and mental health.

There is no organization, obligations, or membership in Falun Gong. The practice is taught free of charge by volunteers in over 60 countries worldwide. For more information, visit www.falundafa.org.

“Emphasizing the understanding of life through health and harmony, Falun Dafa has helped people from varied ethnic, religious, social, educational and economic backgrounds all over the world, sometimes despite persecution and repression...”

— U.S. Congresswoman Lynn Woolsey

Why the Persecution in China?

The former Chinese Communist leader Jiang Zemin launched this persecution in July 1999. Why:

- Jiang was insecure about his authority and jealous of Falun Gong’s popularity—by the late 1990’s, 70-100 million people were practicing in China, outnumbering the Communist Party membership.
- Falun Gong’s principles of Truth, Compassion, and Tolerance stand in direct opposition to the nature of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), which defies traditional values and does not allow any freedom of belief. The head of the CCP fears losing control over people’s minds.

Since then, hundreds of thousands of Falun Gong practitioners have been illegally detained in prisons, labor camps, and so-called mental hospitals for refusing to denounce Falun Gong. They are routinely beaten, tortured, raped, and injected with nerve damaging drugs.

Over 2,800 have been confirmed dead as a result of torture by March of 2006.

“China’s Communist regime [...] has found a lucrative industry in the field of organ transplantation which not only yields great financial rewards, but provides the regime with a powerful tool to coerce and intimidate the population into submission.”

— U.S. Congresswoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen

No One Has Ever Come out Alive

On March 8, 2006, an inside source revealed that the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) set up a secret concentration camp in the Sujiatun District, Shenyang City, more than 6,000 Falun Gong practitioners are imprisoned. No detainee is known to have ever left this place alive.

The Sujiatun concentration camp is equipped with a crematorium and is staffed by an unusually large number of doctors to accommodate its practice of harvesting organs from living, breathing prisoners of conscience. Their bodies are cremated after organs have been removed. The organs are then sold for profit, many of them to foreigners.

The source stated, "The horrors inside this vicious Sujiatun Secret Concentration Camp are shocking, and the brutality of harvesting the detainees' organs and selling them for a huge profit is mind-boggling."

A report by Agence France Presse in October of 2000, told of two concentration camps in China, both specifically for Falun Gong detainees. The camps were said to have been built in northwest and northeast China, with each capable of holding up to 50,000 persons.

Days later, reports leaked out of China describing one such camp in the Northwestern province of Xinjiang. Sources inside China
